

Chef NaNbread

Sort by

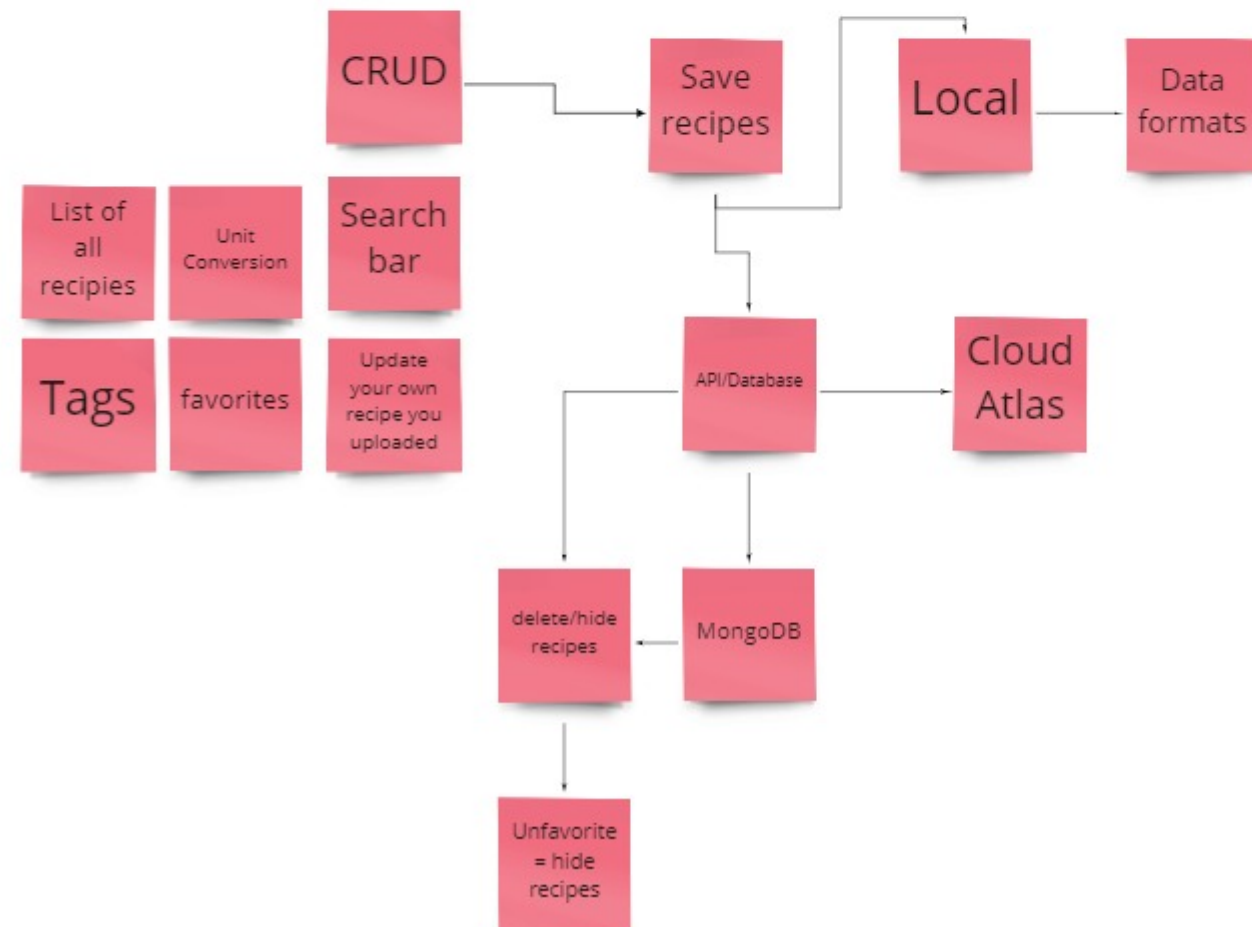

Potential Features

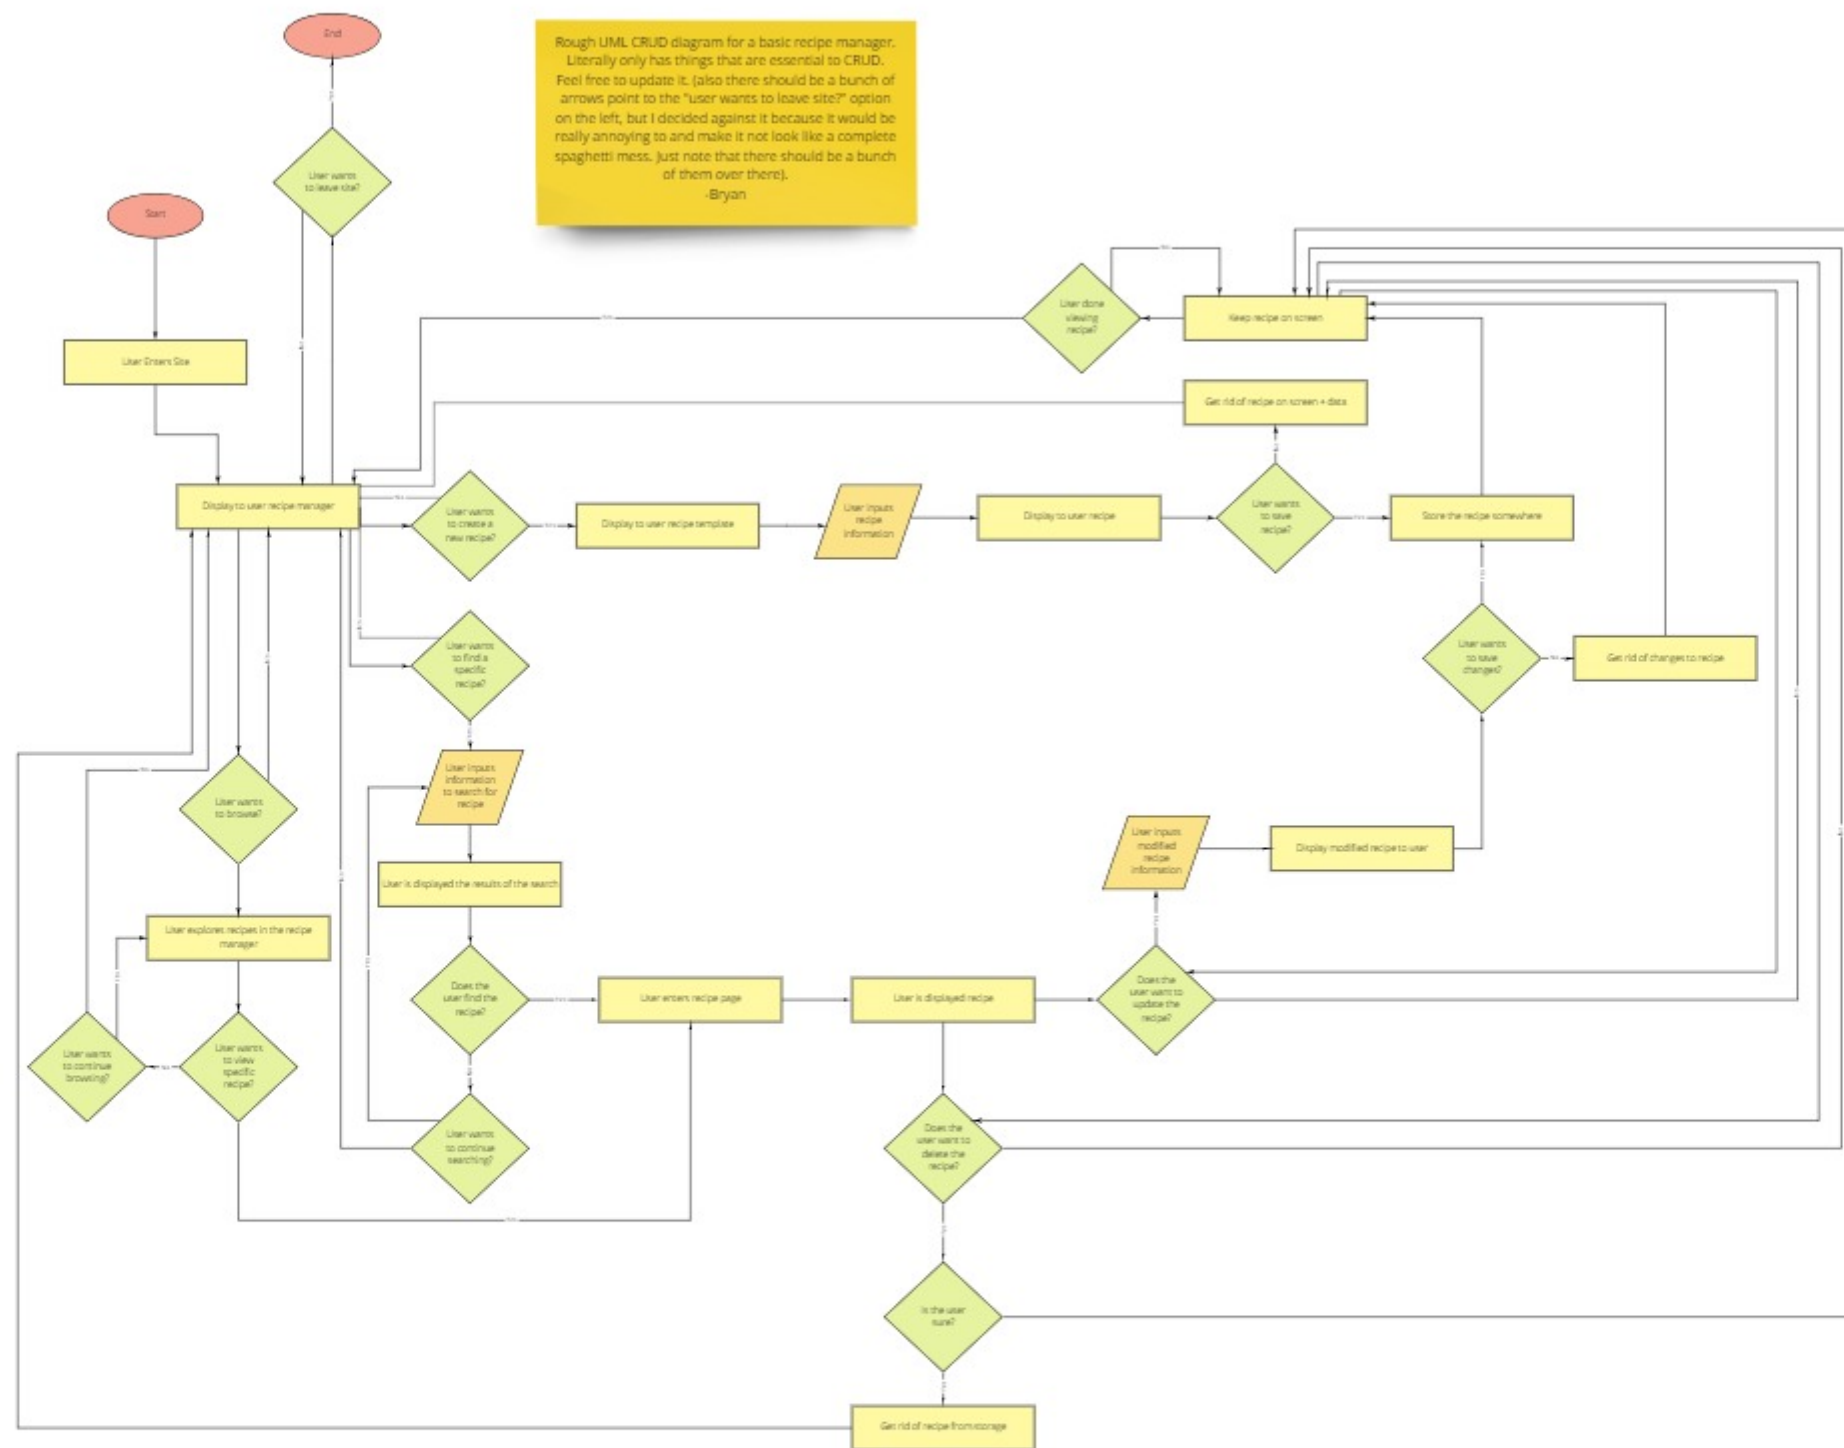

Pitfalls - Avoid These

Main Features

Brandon loves bread. He eats it for breakfast lunch and dinner. All he dreams about is bread, but bread has gotten boring. Store bought bread simply just doesn't do it for him. He needs more. He needs to get this ... BREAD. Brandon wishes there was a place he could go for all things bread. He wants to know what kind of bread he can make, how people like the various types of bread, how he can use the bread to GET IT. Brandon's favorite bread is NaN bread. Please help Brandon get this bread.

User: Busy
soccer mom
Domain: Quick af but money
ain't tight

As a broke college student, I would like to get recipes that are easy to make and cost next to nothing so I don't starve to death.

Rob gets up early (like 5 AM early) to squeeze in a good workout before work in the morning. Often times the most stressful part of his morning is figuring out what he should have for breakfast, and whether or not it is a good thing to have before/after a workout. On top of that, he doesn't really care for food in the first place and doesn't want to have to think about it. He really wishes there was a product that could help him choose a reasonable pre/post workout breakfast on a tight budget, this would make his mornings much less stressful.

Jason is the most pickiest eater in the world. He only eats dino nuggets and drinks capri suns. However, he wants to branch out and learn how to make his own chicken nuggets and sweet juice. So Jason wants an application that keeps track of his favorite types of food and he can easily put up recipes that he wants have to constantly filter out. Jason is likely but he's also a scary We like Jason.

Jack is a kid in middle school who enjoys cooking food in his free time. He wants to learn new recipes that aren't too difficult to make and tastes good so he can impress his family.

Karen really really loves her pet. She feeds him whenever she has to feed her pet pet food. Karen married into a wealthy family, so money is not an issue. She really wishes there was a one-stop location for recipes that would really spice up her pet's taste buds.

Hi, Scott here. I eat the same food every day. I have oatmeal for breakfast, some form of meat and vegetable for lunch and dinner is typically whatever the fudge is in the fridge. I eat for sustenance and not pleasure.

Grandma Mildred wants to look for the newest hottest lasagna recipe to cook for her grandson Johnny. She has a lot of time but her aging eyes makes it hard to see small text on these fancy new screens.

Alex is a college student who's taking 8 classes and also in 5 research projects simultaneously. He barely has any free time outside of studying and work. However, he doesn't want to eat instant ramen and chips all day, so he would really appreciate some recipes that is both efficient and somewhat nutritious.

Michael is looking to get lean and be a mean fighting machine. He is looking to lose weight and wants to find recipes that support his weight loss journey. Michael wants a nice recipe application where he can find and save recipes that are high in protein but low in fats. After a few weeks of using this app, Michael should be below 15% body fat. He is a machine.

Charles' mom cooks a lot and has a lot of unique recipes that she came up with. Unfortunately, she's a boomer and has all her recipes written on recipe cards. Charles wishes he could easily consolidate all his mothers recipes in one place, and maybe change them to fit his needs as he uses them.

My name is Natalie and I am a college student at Powell Puffitt University. I recently gained a cooking as a hobby and want to learn how to create recipes from different cultures. I want a place where I can discuss the science of recipes, but I don't see a requirement that I would like to find myself in using recipes and gradually start making somewhat difficult recipes. It would be convenient if the recipes could be sorted by difficulty.

Yes. I have experience with cooking but want to get better.

Thanks very much to make difficult recipes.

My name is Oll London, I am a transracial man and i love Korea. I want to make korean food and become korean but idk how to cook please help gamsa hamdureo and i look just like BTS jimin